This, Our Nation

By Mackey W. Hill

The inauguration of Dwight D. Eisenhower as President of the United States was finally held this week in Washington in the midst of all the festivities of the occasion: parades, balls and formal receptions. It was a spectacle long to be remembered not only by the joyful Republicans whose hopes so long deferred now were fulfilled, but to all Americans who are interested in pageantry and the show of unity, strength, and confidence.

I would like to notice some things which may escape us entirely. I think that the other aspects of the total spectacle that we have made before the world in this change of administration and administrator at this time should be emphasized. Most of us take it for granted that the transfer of power from Truman to Eisenhower was made peacefully. But here is a positive characteristic that is so fundamental to our system that we may over-look it and rather take it for granted. This demonstration in the superiority of the technique in the peaceful transfer of power from one administrator to another may be the key to our success over Russian rivals in our generation. For to what purpose is the Russian centralization of power if a major part of this power must be dissipated in the struggle to determine who will succeed him?

We may take it for granted when the Russian administrator, Lenin, died in 1928, the competition between the top rivals to fill his place was total. In fact the rivalry only ended when Trotsky fell before the barbarous but efficient blows of an axe wielded by a faithful follower of Stalin. Competitors and rivals are liquidated in this kind of a system.

In contrast America is not weakened but perhaps is strengthened in the process of changing administrators.

Final Exams, Registration Highlight Coming Days

George Fox college 1953 spring semester will officially begin Monday, February 2. Registration will be held in the college library on that day between the hours of 8-12 a. m. and 1-5 p. m.

Miss Mary Sutton, college registrar, will be in charge.

The new courses to be offered for the new semester are: history of Far East under Mackey W. Hill, history instructor; family and rural sociology, abnormal and adolescent psychology, and Oregon school system and law with Paul McNeely, assistant professor of psychology and education; comparative anatomy by Merrill Dade, instructor in biology.

In the Bible department, major prophets, Hebrews and general epistles, and doctrine of Friends will be instructed by Paul Mills, associate professor of Bible.

Helen Willcuts, assistant professor of home economics, is offering household management, nutrition, and advanced clothing construction.

Interpretive reading, 20th century poetry, Tennyson and Browning, and oral interpretation are offered by Dean Donald McNichols, associate professor of English, and Margaret Shattuck, English instructor.

Analytic geometry is added under the instruction of Dr. Marcus Skarstedt, math instructor. Piano ensemble and sight singing under the direction of Carl Reed and Lydia McNichols, music instructors, are the other courses.

The number of students enrolling for the spring semester is uncertain, but it is expected that it will be slightly decreased.

GF Auxiliary Invites Mothers to Campus

George Fox college women's auxiliary has invited students' mothers to visit the campus next week-end between semesters, announces Mrs. Wilma Mills, president.

Friday afternoon at 2:30 a tea for the mothers will be given in Canyon hall parlor.

Dinner will be served with the students in the college dining hall, and the evening's entertainment will be a varsity basketball game at 8:00 p. m.

Homes of Newberg auxiliary members will be open for guests wishing to stay over the week-end.

Singing Men Complete Preparation For Annual Gospel Quartet Meet

Plans are well underway for the fourth annual quartet festival sponsored by the George Fox Singing men to be held February 8 at 3:00 p. m. in the Newberg high school auditorium.

Again taking charge of emcee chores will be Roy Clark, pastor of the First Friends church in Vancouver and former music instructor at GFC. The other master of ceremonies is yet to be selected.

An addition to the program this year will be the participation of a men's chorus consisting of all male students of the college who found it possible to toun out. Directing the group is Harlow Ankeny.

KMCM in McMinnville will have charge of broadcasting but rather than broadcasting direct this year the event will be recorded for release at a later time. Several tapes will be available to organizations and business in the Northwest wishing to sponsor the program for release.

Committees working on preparation for the program are: Orville Winters and Leland Brown in charge of ushering; Sandra Nordyke, Rosemary Ramsey, Pete Snow, Lois Bain, and Muriel Hoov-

Reception to Be Feb. 5

Second semester's formal reception will be Thursday evening, February 5, announces SCU social chairman, Norman Winters.

No definite plans for the reception have been made. Announcement will be made soon as to time and program.

The Lighter Side

It's All Wet!

"Ooh squish." That's the way everyone feels and everything looks on George Fox college campus these days.

Umbrellas, rain coats, and boots are conspicuous equipment these days.

Puddles, rivers, lakes, even filled basements meet one's eyes at every turn.

The floor drain in the student bookstore became a fountain whose stream damaged a large number of books.

The recently laid asphalt tile in the basement of Wood-Mar hall is submerged; however, the water didn't damage it.

If The Crescent isn't what you expected this issue, keep this in mind. Even if the basement office was freshly painted and re-decorated, the staff felt bad. No, their spirits weren't dampened;

You can help, too!

Motive Power---An Essential

Some twenty years ago a Japanese fishing boat was found adrift a few miles off the coast of Washington, with ten or twelve dead fishermen aboard. It was taken into Seattle and the log book was taken to the Japanese Consul to be translated. The men had been fishing off the Japanese coast when their motor went dead. They were unable to start it, and having neither oars nor sails, they were carried by the Japanese current around by Alaska to where they were found. Having little food and water, soon the men began starving to death. The log was kept from day to day till finally the last entry was made and the last man died. Having no motive power they could not guide the boat, and were carried by the current.

A student, son of a banker, was not doing well in his college work. His father came to see the president. In the conversation the president remarked: "Your son seems to have no purpose in life." The father burst into tears and cried: "I will give you a million dollars if you will put a purpose into my son's life."

Some motive power, some driving force, some purpose, must be in every one's life if anything worth while is to be accomplished. The variable winds, or the unseen currents may carry one into the doldrums of sheer laziness; or he may drift into the maelstrom of immorality; or the siren voices of pleasure may entice him into a wasted life. The best motive power one can have is a complete consecration to God.

—Charles Haworth, Professor of Spanish

The Old and New, Behold . . .

These times mark the closing of one door and the opening of another. The old year is around the corner, and the new one is beginning; as is the case in our nation's political leadership. As college students we face the end of one semester and anticipate starting anew. "Time marches on," goes the trite phrase, while the Bible says, "Old things have passed away; behold all things are become new."

Days, months, and years pass with increasing velocity. One recalls with pride workshops, clubs, athletics, experiments, drama, art, music, journalism, and the honors he won during high school days.

But now this student is in college. With the work more difficult, he suddenly realizes that he doesn't have time for the extra activities in which he engaged during younger days. He must learn facts—cramming them in his cranium so that, in a tight spot, some will seep out. He doesn't have time for constructive, soul inspiring activity.

Where do his interests lie? In grades? Important as they may be, they alone are not wholly sufficient. It takes many and varied interests for a well-rounded personality.

Why not try it? With an eye kept on the goal and strong determination one can do both with a sense of satisfaction.

As the new semester starts, as new officers are being elected, as others plead for assistance in committees, organizations and deputation, or just plain work, respond to the call. Let's do work that pays dividends two ways—the one helping and the one being helped.

Columnist Says 'School Spirit Simply Scholastic Support'

Got a note the other day. Operating on the assumption that whatever is given to one instantly becomes the property of the recipient, (see the decision of the Supreme Court on the disposition of the Truman letter to Paul Hume) I am taking the liberty to quote said note verbatim. It is really very short, very simple, very saccharine, so read slowly or you'll miss the whole thing.

Went like this: "Bob—How about that gripe column, soon. B.B.—The Editor (Editor was underlined in the original.)

The following is the upshot of the foregoing.

This note was received on Wednesday morning. Wednesday afternoon, dutiful, servile robot that I am, ((I say this out of a deep desire to identify myself with my contemporaries) I began the composition of "that gripe column".

I had considered considering the notorious lack of "school spirit", one hears about from students of AU, GU, CC, OSC, LC, PU, WU and ZU. I abandoned the project of deploring the lack of "school spirit" after I was unable to find a satisfactory definition of "school spirit" from some of its most rabid supporters. I concluded sensibly enuf I think, that they don't know what they are talking about.

I must be fair by saying that I did not interview every member of the student body to secure a definition of "school spirit". The rabid supporters I mentioned above were seven athletes who happened to drop in the room at one time or another during the two hours that heated arguments issued there. I was not impressed and am not yet imp that "school spirit" as held by my informant lacking at George Fox. I was informed by seven fellows that it is lacking here.

May I repeat that I will not deplore the lack of school spirit here. It is difficult to deplore lack of an as yet undefined entity.

The principal term used by these advocates an increased amount of "school spirit", in floundering for a definition of "school spirit" was "support of student functions."

"Support" was repeated to mean, in the case point, i.e., athletic events, that must attend all athletic events, render noises, for the encouragement of the athletes. Other one was not supporting the team and unless one supports the team, ergo, one does not have "school spirit". And so, I was informed since everyone does not attend athletic events, and more especially because noise is not at a minimum at all games, "school spirit at GFC is sadly lacking.

I disagree.

To me "school spirit" consists of loyalty to school, not to the ball team. While the ball team is part of the school, the important thing to school is the scholastic reputation of its students. As to whether "school spirit" is actually lacking at GFC, I leave you to judge.

Freshman Officers Reveal Betrothals

Two freshman class officers have added their names to Cupid's "mission accomplished" list. Class Secretary and Prexy's Son Ardeth Beals and Victor Pike of Portland revealed their engagement Sunday afternoon, December 21, following the Christmas cantata presented at the First Friends church in Portland.

Ardeth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Beals, pastor of Portland First Friends church, is also news editor of The Crescent. Victor, whose father, Dr. C. J. Pike, is president of Cascade college, is attending school at Cascade.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Vice-President and Swedish Maid
Bob Hodson, vice-president of the freshman class, revealed his engagement to Miss Emily Selander recently.

Miss Selander is employed at the Farmers' Insurance company in Portland. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gustave Selander of Sherwood, Oregon.

Bob is a former Newberg boy, now from Greenleaf, Idaho. The couple, he reports, met after he had moved to Idaho and had come back to Oregon for Twin Rocks young peoples' conference in 1950. They have not set the date for the wedding.

Sermonette . . . The Fulness of Time

By Maribeth McCracken

The Bible speaks in many places of great things which happened when the time was fully come. "When the fulness of the time was come" Christ came, died, rose again and ascended into heaven, and in the fulness of time He will come again.

Time seems very important and yet it is really relatively insignificant, whereas actually the thing of paramount importance is the fulness of time. If it is God's time then it is the right time.

The outpouring of the Holy Spirit was not felt by the apostles until "the day of Pentecost was fully come" when "they were all with one accord in one place."

As young people we are often tempted to get in a hurry and rush God. When the desired answer to a prayer does not appear immediately there is often the feeling that perhaps God has not heard or is neglecting those who love Him. However, more likely He is trying to tell us that time is not fully come. The answer, when it does come, will be the more precious because we have waited until the fulness of time has come

I love the paper,
I think it's swell.
On Friday mornings
I run pell mell
To get my copy,
And read each line.
The stories and columns
I think are fine.

I laugh at the jokes,
I read all the ads;
I note all the news,
I take up the fads.
When I praise the paper,
I scorn those who laugh.
I'm really most loyal—
I'm on the staff.

'Ode on the Life of a Favorite Rat'

By Marjorie Larrance

Not many years ago there dwelt in a certain women's dormitory a courageous family of rats. They boosted their spirits by relating weird stories of how other members of their species had met their deaths. But in spite of the many long-faced warnings showered upon him by his great aunt Sophia, Randolph Rat persisted in carrying on his dangerous activities. Much to aunt Sophia's horror, he would sally forth in broad daylight upon some such unnecessary expeditions as stealing apple cores from the waste basket or popcorn from the sack in the cupboard. He prided himself to a great extent on being able to outrun any broom swinging co-ed who was brave enough to try and terminate his activities on earth.

Even the story about his uncle Ebenezer being stomped to death under a rug by a blood-thirsty college woman, failed to make him leave his vices. Aunt Sophia, stopped to wipe a tear from her eye with her pawless arm, entreating him to beware (she too, in her younger days, had been caught in a vicious trap).

"Ho, Ho!" laughed Randolph, with a ratty grin, "None of those gruesome things will happen to me. I'm far too wise for that," and he started to leave.

"Wait, dear Randolph," cried Sophia. "If you must go, promise me that you will not eat thing that looks or smells strangely. Remember your cousin, Snooty Abigail, who ate poisoned soft crackers. She suffered unmentionable agonies before she was relieved from her torment and taken to heaven."

"Poof," sneered Randolph as he scurried away.

Randolph's besetting sin was his fondness for Limburger cheese and as he ambled down the hall with a stolen filbert between his teeth, that delightful aroma assailed him.

"Hnmmmmmm," he sniffed, almost dropping the filbert in his excitement. "Where in the world is that luscious smell coming from?"

All acquirer with anticipation he galloped down the hall between two suitcases, the "smell" becoming more forceful at each leap. Suddenly he stopped and just in time too, for directly in front of him was an ugly, gaping trap. His nose twitched eagerly for there on the mommoth trap was also the prized Limburger cheese.

"To be or not to be, that is the question", thought Randolph, for he was a college rat. "Well, I'd rather have that cheese than anything else, so I'll just stick my head in there real slowly, grab the cheese and jerk my head back before the things goes off—that's what I'll do." This he did and ker-wham went the trap.

Randolph was laid to rest by his sad-eyed relatives the follow-

Miss Helen Willcuts Relates Incidents During Holiday Vacation in Hawaii

By Bob Byrd

Orchids, two leis consisting of 25 blossoms, were the first greetings from Hawaii that Miss Helen Willcuts received on her Christmas vacation to the islands. Miss Willcuts, dean of women, instructor in Oregon history, and in home economics, and her sister, Miss Arlene Willcuts, arrived at Honolulu, Saturday, December 20, noon.

First on their list of adventures was lunch. Donald Crozier, a cousin who lives on the islands, took them to the Moana hotel, on the famous Waikiki beach, for lunch.

From Honolulu Helen and Arlene flew to Hilo, where the Croziers live. While staying at Hilo they visited the world famous Kilauea, Mauna Loa.

"If you dig down three feet in the area where the last eruption took place, you can cook a steak," Helen reports. "People don't run away during eruptions, instead they rush to watch. Hundreds of spectators crowd the location to watch the fireworks."

While at the Croziers' they took a two-day journey around the island of Hawaii. For the first time they saw sugar cane and coffee growing.

Like most tourists the two ladies took advantage of the fine beaches and went swimming.

At Honolulu the two ladies stayed at Moana hotel, on Waikiki.

"We had dinner with Gervas and Amy Carey in their lovely home, just six blocks from Waikiki beach," reports Miss Willcuts. "It was rather unusual to see Dr. Carey without a large yard to putter in."

New Year's arrived with a big bang in Honolulu, according to Miss Willcuts. "It seemed like everyone was exploding fireworks," she said.

Before leaving on January 3, the two tourists from Oregon attended the broadcast of "Hawaii Calls" from the Moana hotel.

Miss Willcuts and her sister left Honolulu that night and arrived in Portland Sunday morning, January 4.

"It was the most enjoyable two weeks I have spent in a long, long time," Helen said as a far away look came into her eyes.

Push to Publish Paper; Ardeth Beals Will Edit

The freshman class yesterday held a unanimous ballot for Ardeth Beals as editor of the freshman edition of The Crescent to appear on February 20.

Ardeth was page editor of The Washingtonian, student publication of Washington high school, in Portland.

Anne Tuning was elected to her as assistant editor. Ardeth will appoint the other members of her staff at a later date.

Chapel Schedule

Monday, January 25—Mr. Donald Edmundson.

Tuesday, January 27 to Friday, January 30—Semester Tests.

Tuesday, February 3—SCU Chapel.

Wednesday, February 4—Study Habits.

Thursday, February 5—ASB Chapel.

Friday, February 6—Study Habits.

Churches to Join Evangelistic Campaign; Noted Evangelist to Be Guest Speaker

Rev. H. C. Moore, pastor of the Newberg Baptist church and publicity chairman of the community revival, announced today that fifteen churches of Newberg and the surrounding towns are joining in an evangelistic campaign to be held in the Newberg Friends church March 15-29.

Dr. J. C. McPheeters, pastor, noted evangelist, and president of Asbury Theological seminary, has been secured as the campaign speaker.

Lawrence Green, widely known song leader, baritone soloist, and youth leader, has been named song evangelist for the services.

Carl Reed, GFC music instructor, will be at the organ. The pianist will be announced at a later date.

College CE Group Picks New Prexy

The college CE group of the Newberg Friends church has been very active throughout the past week, reports the new president, Marilyn Barnes.

Last Sunday Gene Brown, junior from Shedd, Oregon, led the lesson. He talked on "The Eternal Life Insurance Co." The previous Sunday Marilyn Barnes led the group in a consecration and candle lighting service.

The CE group did not meet on Sunday, January 4, in order to allow its members to attend the CE conference of the Oregon Yearly meeting held at the Lents church in Portland. Rev. Oscar Brown, pastor at the Greenleaf Friends church was the featured speaker at this year's conference.

The local CE group has pledged $400 to the Oregon Yearly meeting.

Student Body Office Undergoes Change

The Associated Students' office has undergone a change. It no longer has a cement floor, buff walls, with red and blue tables.

The floor is now covered with brown marbelized tile; the walls are shaded green with a white ceiling, and the furniture is pearl gray. Patterned draperies with a touch of red and framed pictures have been added in the office.

The Associated Students, sponsors of the project, acknowledge maintenance men, John Fankhauser and Isaac Smith, and students, Betty Brown and Gene Comfort, for their labor.

All are invited to inspect the new room.

Student Committee Revises AS Laws

Before election of major offices in February, the reorganization of the student government will be completed, announces prexy Ralph Beebe.

This committee is composed of Klane Robison, chairman; Maribeth McCracken, Margaret Weber, Harold Weesner, Eugene Brown, Ralph Beebe and Dean Donald McNichols.

Rosetta Ballard, secretary, announces that all the regular members—Ralph Beebe, Verne Martin, Rosetta Ballard, Leland Brown, and Harold Weesner have perfect attendances to student council meetings during the first semester.

Class representatives Don Lamm, Dave Elliott, Robert Herring, and Melba Chandler also have perfect records.

QUAKER CAMPUS CLUB COMMENTS

SMA Holds Morning Prayer
Jack Hoskins, SMA president, urges every ministerial student to attend the prayer meeting held every Wednesday morning at 6:15 in the prayer room in Wood-Mar hall.

Portland Breakfast for Gold Q
Breakfast in Portland Saturday morning, January 31, will climax test week for the Gold Q members. The alumni club members will also attend.

Plans are being made for the traditional Gold Q banquet, which will be held sometime in February. Committee personell in charge of arrangements are Margaret Weber and Maribeth McCracken, entertainment; Alice Hodson and Muriel Hoover, dinner; and Virginia Peters, Rosemary Ramsey, Lucille Lewis, and Lea Wilkinson, decorations.

Missionary Conferette Coming
The second annual Missionary Conferette will be held Saturday, May 9, on the GF campus.

"Untold Millions Are Untold" has been selected as the theme for this one-day event. Over 100 students from neighboring western Oregon colleges are expected to attend. Those attending will be selected from the membership of the FMF and Intersarsity Christian Fellowship groups from each school.

Six missionary speakers are to be secured. They will give talks on facing the problems of the mission field, needs of missionary work, and the steps of preparation the missionary needs.

College dining facilities will be used for both lunch and dinner. All sessions of the conferette will be in the administration building.

AS Vote Unanimous For Ron Barnick

Ronald Barnick, junior from Salem, was unanimously elected business manager of The Crescent at a meeting of the Associated Students of George Fox college held January 8.

The position of Crescent business manager was left vacant by the resignation of Bob Adams shortly before Christmas. Barnick and freshman Don Lamm were nominated as candidates to fill the vacancy, but Lamm since then has been scheduled to work part time so he withdrew his name.

At the January 8 meeting of the Associated Students a motion was passed to give Ronald a unanimous ballot for the position. He assumes the duties of business manager with this issue of The Crescent.

Students of Foods Visit Tillamook Cheese Factory

Wednesday, January 14, the foods class with their instructor, Miss Helen Willcuts, spent the afternoon on a field trip to the cheese factory at Tillamook, Oregon.

The class is currently studying dairy products, and wanted to get first-hand information.

Members of the class are Ellen Haines, Sarah Smith, Myra Sullivan, and Nancy Trautman.

While there, each one received a free sample of cheese.

BOOK BROWSING

By Mrs. Mary Dade

Book of Ruth
The library has just received a beautiful edition of the Book of Ruth. It is based on the King James translation, with a preface by Mary Ellen Chase.

You will want to examine the illustrations by Arthur Szky, a man who has studied the art of Italian miniature. He is recognized as one of the leading painters of miniatures in the world today.

The text is set in large type, divided into sections so that the illustrations coincide with the story. The publisher, Heritage press, states "the classics which are our heritage from the past, in editions which will be the heritage of the future."

Witness
Another book, of entirely different character, is Witness by Whitcomb Chambers, which is an interestingly written account of one's experience with the Communist party and his repudiation of it.

Expected to be a controversial work because of the bias each reader may have on the Hiss-Chambers trial, still the name of the author, theme of his work, and the time of our times combine to make this volume one of the most significant autobiographies of the twentieth century.

Witness is the first book of this kind to acknowledge the great danger of Communism on the human

Sports Scoreboard

By Ralph Beebe

In addition to being a successful pastor, teacher, coach, husband, and father, George Bales has proven himself as a good businessman, so far as athletics at GFC are concerned.

George takes care of the monetary phase of the athletic department, as well as the regular coaching duties. Through, to a large extent, the untiring efforts of this one, the athletic plant here is comparable to that of many colleges several times as large.

The college, its students, and its alumni, owe a debt of gratitude to George Bales, who is willing to put in long hours at thankless tasks, such as plumbing, and carpentering, so that the gymnasium facilities might be among the best.

But financial difficulties are still apparent. Alumni contributions are welcomed.

Ralph Beebe

Student manager of the Quaker basketball team is Darrell Trueb. The popular freshman from Portland was a kick-off specialist in football—now he gets the kicks of everybody else. To him go the tasks of washing towels, taping ankles, keeping suits in order, sweeping dressing room floors, and accepting the gripes of the "all-important" varsity men.

Although there was a good response to Sports Scoreboard's Pick-the-Rose-Bowl-Winner contest, no one hit upon the correct score. Many entries guessed the result would be in the neighborhood of 13 or 14 to 6 or 7.

USC won 7-0. So, the closest guesses were the following:

Milford House, 2824 Illinois, Caldwell, Idaho, 7-6.

Sports Scoreboard, 14-0.

Newberg Cagers Meet Quakers Here

The Quakers will entertain the Newberg Merchants tonight in a non-conference game, the prelim beginning at 6:45, with the varsity encounter set for 8 p. m.

Multnomah college was to have played, but the Portland school announced its withdrawal from the Metropolitan conference Wednesday, forcing a cancellation of its entire schedule. Coach Bales arranged for a substitute game with the Merchants. The Businessmen beat GFC by a dozen points in an early season meeting.

Next Friday the Balesmen return to conference action, playing host to Oregon Medical. The following night it will be Hillsboro Economy Drug at George Fox. Tuesday, February 3, the Newberg Merchants play in the Quaker gym for the third time.

All games will be preceded by 6:45 preliminaries.

Grimm Tops League In Scoring Average

Leading the Quaker scoring is Darwin "Cub" Grimm, a 6:01 freshman forward, with 117 points in six games, a 19.5 average. Junior guard Verne Martin, team captain, has hit 81 points in eight starts for a 10-1 average.

Grimm is leading the conference scoring with 48 points in two games for a 24 point average. Richie Heins and Paul Hein of Concordia follow with 38 and 37 points respectively. Despite the similarity of names, the two Concordia boys are not related.

Fourth in the point parade is Dick Schultz of Reed, with 28, followed by his teammate, Dick Udell, with 25.

Last year Concordia's Paul Hein ended second in the scoring race, with 189, an 18.9 average. Nigel Shöckey of George Fox led the league with 200 points.

Quakers Outclass Dentist During Overtime Play Here

A sparkling Quaker quintet, playing a style similar to last season's, edged out Oregon Dental college 64-62 in one overtime last Friday night on the Quakers' home cedar.

The two teams were evenly matched throughout the entire game. Dental led 17-13 at the end of the first quarter but the Balesmen worked up to a half-time lock 26-26. The visitors again took the lead and the score was 47-41 at the finish of the third stanza.

The Foxonians crept from behind to bring the score to a 54-54 deadlock at the final buzzer. At the end of a furious overtime the Quakers had their first conference victory of the season.

Sparkling the squad for George Fox college was Forward Cub Grimm who dumped 28 points and retrieved 20 rebounds. Leading scorers for Oregon Dental were Bill Laney and John Noel each with 13.
